Dr Philip Evans is a Clinical Research Fellow and part-time GP in Exeter and Senior Partner in St Leonard's Practice. He is also Director of the Primary Care Research Network (SW), one of only eight in England. He was an RCGP Research Training Fellow from 1988-1990. He has an interest in the prevention of diabetes through the early diagnosis and management of pre-diabetes and also cardiovascular disease in primary care. He was the principal investigator on the WAKEUP study, funded by Diabetes UK.

He is currently working in a multidisciplinary team developing interventions for patients at risk of diabetes. His other research interests include the metabolic syndrome and the importance of family history of cardiovascular disease in primary care.
